Gentlemen

A Persian is showing a coin what appears to be a decadrachm of Eukratides, king of Bactria, (Silver) it has the appearance of a genuine coin but as I never seen the like of it before I am at a loss what to do about it. Can you tell me what the weight of such a coin ought to be and its approximate value. The coin is in good condition, well struck on a nearly round planchet.

I have to beg return of the Roman coins with thanks for what I have [illegible]

Gentlemen.

Your of June 20 received and thank you for your kindness. In regard the Bactrian coin would say that it is like No 32, Plate 52 (B.V. Head Greek Coins) and weighs 1630 grains or 3 oz. 16 4 dwgt. So you see it is a remarkable coin if it is O.K. The man says he has an offer of $40 for it but he expects a much larger price but I may not get time to name a figure at which he will sell it. Any additional advice or information on this subject will be very much appreciated.
